Council of Ambassadors Turns Question Over to the League of Nations

GENEVA, Feb. 6-Norman H. Davis, Undersecretary of State in the Wilson Administration, and his fellow memhers of the commission set up by the League of Nations in response to the request of the Ambassadors' Confer-ence to deal with the difficulties which have arisen regarding the question of Memel, expect to reach Memel on Feb. 10, in order to study the situation on the spot, and to familiarize themselves with the problems of the port itself.

The commission has been completed by the appointment of S. G. Kroller, member of the Economic Council of Dutch Foreign Office, and Mr. Hoernell, consulting engineer and member of the Academy of Technical Sciences at Stockholm.

Collecting Full Information During several days in Geneva, Mr.

Davis, who, it is interesting to note, is the first American citizen to be directly associated with League action of a political character, as distinct from economic or humanitarian, has been engaged in collecting full information concerning the political aspect, and has decided not to enter into any political relationship, while in Memel itself.

While there, the commission will receive only representatives of various interests connected with the port and the Niemen River, and negotia-Davis, who, it is interesting to note

One of the bills introduced at this session of the Legislature which the anti-vaccinationists supported today was that of the Medical Liberty League, Inc. It provides for the admission of any unvaccinated child to the public schools on the written Dr. Walter J. Graves. It calls for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of human smallpox virus.

Fatalities Hinted

Leland Powers, legislative counsel for the Medical Liberty League, introduced the league's bill. He explained that the issue was not as to whether vaccination is or is not meri-torious, but whether the State shall make it compulsory before a child can be admitted to school. Medical prac-titioners had admitted, he said, that illnesses and fatalities occur at times in the vaccination process and that as a consequence this phase of the case would not be presented as an issue.

Dr. Graves told of reading three articles in the Commonwealth, writ ten by Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, pro-fessor of preventive medicine and hygiene at Harvard Medical School; Dr. Benjamin White, director of the State Biologic Laboratories, and Dr. Robert N. Nye, formerly assistant director of the state laboratory.

Later Dr. Graves made a searching investigation to determine to what extent and how long the state labora-tory had been producing so-called vaccine virus.

He wrote to the American producers of "vaccine virus" in the effort to determine the exact nature and source of their product. They were selling their virus as cowpox, he said, but on further inquiry, they admitted that they were not fully informed as to the

He cannot, therefore, properly compare vaccination with virus so derived with vaccination performed with virus of any other derivation; and the weight of evidence is overwhelming that the vaccination which has prevailed during the last 125 years, all over the world, has not been performed with virus of human smallpox origin. Dr. White is, therefore, logically estopped from appealing to vaccination statistics in general.

He has much more justification for comparing the vaccination now practiced in Massachusetts with state virus, with the variolation or small-pox inoculation, which was practiced so generally before vaccination was introduced by Dr. Jenner.

Nation is not to be lightly set aside by the Legislature of any state. His intelligence, his conscience, the consecration of the oath administered by his first disciplinarian, his father, and the experience of his great office, advise him as to what is the duty and the best interest of America and the American citizen. The Legislature of Massachusetts should uphold the citizen of Massachusetts in his wisdom and righteousness as President of the United States.

D. Chauncey Brewer of the American Civic League for Immigrants, was the first speaker of the day and he advocated the immediate participation of this country in world affairs on the ground that it must come sooner or was realized in the United States the better it will be for the world.

He was followed by the Rev. Mr. Root who said that his federation, representing 90 per cent of the Protes-tants of Massachusetts, demanded that Massachusetts lead the way as her President is today asking. He read President is today asking. He reache resolutions of the federation, and said that the committee faced serious responsibility in considering the resolutions before it.

The Rev. E. W. Whippen of the Somerville Universalist Church, took the same stand and insisted that the Legislature of Massachusetts today has an opportunity not given it in years of restoring this State's onetime pre-eminence in thought and in sound leadership for the right.

The Rev. George Lyman Payne fol-lowed, saying that this Nation's ideals all pointed to its entering the Court and then by obtaining the peaceful adjustment of difficulties as the course of the nations in the future. Joseph Walker, former Speaker of the Massachusetts House, was emphatic in his insistence that there is but one course for this Nation to take, and that any other will bring discredit to it not to be forgotten. Mr. said there was not politics in the reso-lution, for Elihu Root had drawn up practically the plans for the Perma-nent Court and that John Bassett Moore, another American is now sit ting with the Court as a member.

Mr. Hancock's Remarks William James Hancock, a student of international and civic law, read his remarks, part of which follow: The fears of "entangling alliances" with which the people are perpetually exhorted to debase themselves in the pusilianimous pacifism of humiliat-ing and cowardly isolation in interna-tional suspicion plus the inferiority complex of belief that America must complex of belief that America must always be the victim of foreign diplo-matic superiority can find no justifi-cation in American participation in the Association of Nations in the Permanent Court of International

If the great American popularly credited with warning against "en-tangling alliances," in fighting the war of the American Revolution to its successful conclusion five years after the Declaration of Independence, made any "reservation" against the Declaration of the American the Declaration of the American right to make treaties and contract alliances, history, does not record it. As Washington was willing to have another nation ally herself with America in her struggle for independent national existence, we should now realize that to insure the safety in perpetuity of the Nation, it is necessary for us to participate in the benefits, and share the burdens and obligations, of the Association of Nations in the Permanent Court of International Justice.

Illinois Teachers Indorse

Education as Peace Factor

Special from Monitor Bureau CHICAGO, Feb. 6—Education for peace is scheduled for definite study in Illinois' public schools if the expressed will of the state teachers' as-sociation is followed. Recently the state teaching force put itself on record as favoring the orientation of history teaching with the emphasis laid on civilization instead of war adopting this resolution:

adopting this resolution:

We are convinced that if the present civilization is to endure, we must recognize the great importance of education for peace rather than for war. As there are many peace-time pursuits which develop virile qualities and offer opportunities for bravery, heroism, and self-sacrifice, we believe that the inculcation of peace ideals and the emulation of peace deals and the emulation of peace heroes should be placed in their proper relation; therefore, we favor developing such subject matter and conduct as will exalt the peace worker. Furthermore, we assert that the truth should be taught about the causes of the war and its terrible consequences, and that texts, the whole world over, should be designed so as to outlay war firmly and finally. finally.

The resolution, framed by the Chi cago teachers, was presented by Miss Florence Holbrook, principal of the Forestville school, a veteran peace worker in the educational field. She said to a representative of The Chris-tian Science Monitor:

tian Science Monitor:

We see the need of permeating our education with the ideal of peace instead of militarism. Each country teaches history from its own national bias. Some of our southern history books, even, would not be used in northern schools, nor our northern books in southern classrooms. When it comes to explaining causes of wars, each country, in its texts, shows the righteousness of its own cause. While we cannot change textbooks at once, we can at least teach children to question what they read, to be on question what they read, to be on their guard for national prejudice, and to be tolerant of other nations' points of view. This we regard as one step toward the goal of a genu-ine peace education.

'Big Business" in New York Ceases During Wilson Services

Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK, Feb. 6-Business in New York was practically suspended today during the services for Woodrow Wilson. The Stock Exchange, the Consolidated Stock Exchange, the Curb Market, and the Cotton, Sugar and Maritime exchanges closed at noon. Public offices and courts adjourned. Many business establishments and industries ceased operations.

The League of Foreign Born Citizens, through its president, Nathaniel Phillips, paid its tribute to one who "typified to foreign-born citizens the noblest expression of the aspirations of America as the hope of mankind," and who "viewed with no narrow fear the coming to our shores of those who. from afar, saw in the Republic of the strivings."

The public schools adjourned after memorial exercises and forts in and near New York fired salutes. A spe-cial memorial service was held in Madison Square Garden under the aus ion, and many churches in the city held services at the same hour.

eulogies of the war President, uttered in the hours immediately following his passing, are more or less ephemeral. Yet, Democrats are convinced that this recrudescence of appreciation of "Wilsonish" will soak in. Its effects will remain. The beneficiary, it is argued, will be the ideals and the party with which Mr. Wilson was identified.

Democratic leaders are indulging in such reflections in the consciousness that their departed captain would it so. In his last public utterance—the so. In his last public utterance—the defiant little speech on his own door-step on Armistice Day, 1923—Mr. Wilson foreshadowed a turn in the tide of opinion toward the things he stood for. Thus, the expressions of men like Coolidge, Hughes, Hoover, Weeks, Borah, Lodge and Hiram Johnson, as well as of other outstanding Republi-cans, are held by Democrats to be cans, are neig by Democrats to be something more than perfunctory. Each and all of them acclaim, in varying phraseology, the "lofty idealism" underlined by President Coolidge's proclamation. While no Republican plaudits approve outright the policies which Wilson espoused,

Around him and his name there raged an endless conflict. Republicans and ocrats alike took part in it. While he lived, Republicans were amble to impute "Wilsonian" plans and programs to the Democratic Party.

By the same token those Democrats who thought "Wilsonism" a lost cause so far as practical politics are con-cerned, deplored the sentimental necessity of having to stand by the old faith. All those arguments and recriminations have now been eliminated. Woodrow Wilson has ceased to be an issue, but his ideals still live.

He continues:

continues:

Generally speaking, not more than 25 per cent of the income of the family should be paid for shelter, or not more than one week's wage or salary for one month's rent. At present many families are paying a much greater percentage of their income for rent than is economically sound. It is an economic fact that undue increasing of rents, when it affects the great mass of people, seriously restricts their purchasing power for other commodities and thus interferes with business as a whole.

Rents generally have already gone up more than enough to cover increased taxes, water rates, insurance, interest on money, repairs, and a reasonable increase in the value of the property.

Modification of 48-Hour Law Urged by Mr. Garcelon at Legislative Hearing

A plea that the Legislature enact a law permitting two shifts to be worked in the textile mills of the State, under which women and minors would be allowed to work until 10 o'clock at night, was made today before the leg-islative Committee on Labor and In-dustry, by William F. Garcelon, repre-sentative of the textile interests of the State at the hearing on the petitions of George A. Long to repeal the 43-hour law for women and children. Mr. Garcelon said that the Massa-

The act promised them independence as soon as a stable government could be established, and declared that meanwhile it was desirable that they should exercise as much control over their Government as was possible without impairing American overeignty.

Proceeding in accordance with the intent of this law, and with the approval of the President of the United States and the co-operation of the American Governor-General, they proceeded to organize and conduct their Government in such a way that the Governor-General was reduced to a figurehead. Some of the powers of this official were transferred by law to the heads of the executive depart-ments, the Council of State or the Board of Control, and it was declared that the intent of the Jones Act made it proper, if not necessary, that these Filipino officials should be responsible to the Legislature instead of to the Chief Executive. Proceeding upon their own inter-pretation of the autonomy act, the Fliipino statesmen then advanced the further proposition that the Governor-General should exercise his remaining powers only upon the advice of minis-ters responsible to the Legislature Generally speaking, Governor-General Harrison played the rôle assigned to him in this transformation scene, and by the end of his administration re-sponsible, or parliamentary, soversponsible, or parliamentary, govern-ment had been established. by stretching that constitution until i Thus when the Filipino majority leaders broke with Governor-General Wood they were not only protecting their own personal political fortunes and those of their party, but they were fighting also to regain that degree of self-government which their country had enjoyed at the end of the administration of President Wilson In the latter purpose they undoubtedly will receive a large measure of support in the United States, espe-cially from people who do not under-stand the conditions which made necessary the temporary withdrawal of some part of that autonomy. Responsibility Without Authority No one realizes this better than General Wood, and in view of recent developments in Philippine affairs the which the Governor-General held last June concerning the powers of his office and the possibility of their being successfully used in defiance of sustained Filipino opposition are of great interest. At that time I asked General Wood if it were not sponsfoility without adequate authority, so far as practical politics goes.

"Yes, to a large extent that is true, he replied. "But I haven't hesitated to let them know that I actually possess the powers of 'supervision and control' given the Governor-General by the Jones Act. Control is about the widest word in the English language. Once or twice I have had to tell them that they couldn't do a certain thing, and if they tried to that I would put a guard over the Insular treasury and see that no money was paid out. Of course ulti-mately we have authority to do almost anything. I can appoint and remove control the armed forces and can do what it wishes here. "But isn't the use of this ultimate authority almost beyond the possibilities of practical politics?" I asked.

"Yes, it is. We wouldn't be backed up at home. And they know it."

Japan.
Viscount Takahashi is of a most lovable personality, but he has never been credited with particular ability save as a financier. He was projected into the Premiership by the force of circumstances, and his Ministry did nothing which the nation is apt to remember with gratitude, albeit no grave mistakes were made. The Japanese Santa Claus is a phrase coined about his personal appearance. He nothing which the nation is apt to remember with gratitude, albeit no grave mistakes were made. Viscount Takahashi Popular

Japan is rapidly revising her estimate of his ability, however, and at present he is riding on the crest of the wave of popularity. Seldom has any politician been able to grasp the single opportunity offered him with as good effect as did Viscount Taka-hashi. That the Selyu-kai was bound to split sooner or later was certain, but the former Premier brought about but the former Premier brought about the breaking up of the party at a time

most advantageous to himself.
When Premier Hara was assassinated on the eve of the Washington Conference, the nation realized the necessity of continuing Mr. Hara's policies until after the conference had met and adjourned. The Minister of Finance, Viscount Takahashi, was chosen to succeed his late chief as Premier. The Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, Baron Tatsuo Yamamoto, a strong Satsuma man, had expected to receive the office. The selection of Viscount Takahashi sowed the seeds of discord within the ranks of the Seiyu-kai, the majority party, that have now borne fruit. Viscount Takahashi's Government fell on June 6, 1922, not because of defeat in the Lower House but because of this internal dissension. The Premier sought the resignations of his Ministers of Education and Railways, both of them unpopular with the nation and members of the anti-Takahashi faction in the Seiyu-kai. They refused. According to the Jap-anese Constitution, a Minister of State is responsible only to the throne, so that the Premier was powerless to force their resignations. The only alternative was to return his own appointment as Premier to the throne, with the consequence that the entire Cabinet went out of office.

Viscount Klyoura Succeeds Kato

Admiral Baron Tomosaburo Kato, called to form a new Ministry, came to a compromise agreement with the Seiyu-kai, whereby he was enabled to weather the Diet storms. Baron Kato was succeeded by Count Gomei Yama-moto, who formed another super-party Cabinet, but again there was some sort of a tacit understanding with the Selyu-kai. When Viscount Ki-youra formed his Ministry at the beginning of the year, however, no agree-ment was entered into with the Selyu-Instead, he sought support in the House of Peers. The advocates of party government rose in revolt. Vis-count Takahashi summoned the leaders of his party and, when no agree-ment could be reached to combat the TOKYO, Jan. 18 (Special Correspondence)—Viscount Takahashi, one time Premier of Japan, must be credited with having made the most adroit political move Japan has witnessed in years when he announced his intention of doing so. More than half of the party supported him.

Baron Tatsuo Yamamoto saw a chance of shaking off the leadership of Viscount Takahashi, and, with more than a hundred members of the Seiyu-kai, bolted the party and lectared in favor of supporting the Kiyoura Government.

The development of political affairs in Japan since Dec. 27 has been rapid and difficult to follow. The split within the ranks of the Seiyu-kai is but one phase, important in itself but minor when compared with the broad movement in the direction of party government now being made by the people of Japan.

SHOE ARBITER

Edwin Newdick Chosen by Haverhill Citizens' Committee

HAVERHILL, Mass., Feb. 6 (Spe cial)-Edwin Newdick, neutral arbitor under the peace agreement for the control of the local shoe industry, entered upon his new duties today with the important issue of determining the hours of work on Saturday forenoons likely to be the first to come before him for adjudication, the manufacturers have voted in favor of arbitration and the union reserving the right to decide later whether it will accept arbitration or not. Mr. Newdick was named the neu-tral arbiter late yesterday by the citizens' committee after the Hayerhill Shoe Manufacturers' Association and the Shoe Workers' Union had failed to agree on a candidate. The conference lasted five hours, Mr. Newdick was the choice of the union Other candidates for the position were Eugene Szepesi and Ralph O. Reed, both having the indorsement of the manufacturers' association

Mr. Newdick will devote his entire time to the work. In addition to acting as neutral arbiter on the arbitraand association being represented. Mr. Newdick will practically be the direc-tor of the shoe industry, conducting research work when not otherwise occupied.

Before the citizens' committee assembled, some doubt was expressed as to the committee reaching a decision yesterday, members of the com-mittee arguing that the matter was of great importance and required careful deliberation, and citing the fact that it has taken the union and association about six weeks to make their selec tions. Members of the committee had gone so far as to procure considerable data about other men who would be auitable candidates for the place in the event of there being a disagree-ment. After the meeting it was given out that the selection was unanimous

ary to be paid the neutral arbiter ould be determined by the union and associations in conference, but mem-bers of the committee did not hesitate to state that is was perfectly under-stood that the salary was to be $10,000

Mr. Newdick is not an entire stranger to the city as he was em-ployed here a few years ago by the Shoe Workers' Union in compiling statistics and gathering data for advertising in a wage campaign. He is graduate of Dartmouth College and the school of business administration and is an industrial engineer of wide experience. He was a member of the Labor Board under President and recently was occupied in Washington in compiling a brief for the Railway Mails Corporation. He has made a survey of housing conditions in New York and has worked as editorial writer on nationally known newspapers.

It is not unlikely that there will be at the request of the union. It is known that the union has considered several proposals regarding wages but these have not been submitted to the manufacturers, the union delaying matter until the arbitration ma chinery was completed and ready for

ART Whistler Exhibit in Lowell

Whistler Exhibit in Lowell
LOWELL, Mass., Feb. 6—A large collection of reproductions of portraits of whistler and some of the artist's own works is on exhibition at the Whistler House on Worthen Street, the Lowell Art Association, custodians of the house, presenting the hangings which fill the main gallery of the birthplace. Some of the works have been given to the association and others were loaned by Charles E. Goodspeed of Boston.

The reproductions from etchings and paintings, many of the latter in color, are illustrative of the quantity and quality of the output of the exhibition will be open to the public daily until about the middle of March, when it will be succeeded by an exhibition of portraits and other works of art of old Lowell, commemorative of the one hundredth anniversary of the building of the house.

The candlelight "blowout," with which the association will inaugurate the centenary exhibition will be held on March 1. It will be a costume party, in the habits of the period of 1820-50. The participants will be dressed much the same as men and women were clad when the Whistler family lived in Worthen Street. Trunks and chests in attics will give up of their treasures in the way of garments for this occasion, the "blowout" reviving the custom of celebrating the lengthening of the days after the vernal equinox.

Samplers and Dolls

Samplers and Dolls

Samplers from the collection of Mrs.
J. T. Coolidge are on view at the Bookshop for Boys and Girls on Boylston Street. There has always been something absorbing about these masterpieces of needlework, which so comprehensively indicate the achievements of young ladies of the past. With what nimble fingers and unutterable patience they placed these decorative patterns on canvas! With minute stitches they filled the space with alphabets, numbers, decorative motives, and in the center, as if in the very heart of it

A most entertaining collection of doll portraits by Frances D. Leavens and Faith R. Leavens are also being shown at the Bookshop. They have taken dolls of all kinds, rag and china dolls, dolls from every nation. In period costume they have grouped them into large families that sit with doll-like dignity for their portraits. They have filled these small pictures with endless details that will fascinate even the eye of a grown-up.

BEVERLY-IPSWICH

BUS LINE ABANDONED BEVERLY, Mass., Feb. 6 (Special)naufficient revenue to cover the cost of operation is the reason assigned by officials of the Entern Massachusetts line between this city and Ipswich. The line was put in operation some months ago in conjunction with bus operation from Beverly to Essex and Hamilton-Wenham. Under winter conditions, it is stated that the road often lost 20 cents for every mile of bus operation. The conservative operating expense is 28 and sometimes 30 cents a mile.

While not on a profitable basis, road officials are hopeful that the Beyerly-Bssex line will be making operating expenses and possibly a small margin of profit within a year. At the present time, with normal patronage, the line comes within 8 cents a mile of covering operating costs. The schedule recently was altered to afford better accommodations for night patrons.

The London String Quartet played Haydn's Quartet in D major, op. 64, No. 5; Beethoven's D major quartet, op. 18, No. 3; and between them a quartet in G minor by Frank Bridge. This work was new to most of the audience at least; yet it is as full of light as a June morning and comparable in the sheer beauty of its harmonies to Schönberg's "Verklärte Nacht." It was raptly heard and warmly appreciated. Mr. sheer beauty of its harmonies to Schonberg's "Verkilärte Nacht." It was raptly heard and warmly appreciated. Mr. Bridge, like most of the younger English school of composers, has turned his hand to many forms of writing, apparently with equal success. Certainly no music for four string instruments has been produced in our generation which can surpass this piece of writing.

The playing of these London men needs no further encomium. It is precise without being meticulous and is suffused with an ardor of feeling that strikes fire from the musical enthusiasm of the players.

Announcement was made of another concert offered by the Harvard department of music, through the generosity of Mrs. Coolidge to take place on the evening of Friday, March 7, when the Elshuco Trio will appear. C. M. S.

The primary purpose of the Maine Winter Carnival, since its inception in this city three years ago, has been to interest a greater number of the residents as well as visitors from out of the State in the enjoyment that Maine's winter facilities afford. This has been largely accomplished and hundreds are now entering annually into the enjoyment of skiing, snoeshoeing, skating, hockey and similar pursuits. During the carnival days, many of the men, women and children will don typical winter sport garments. Some of them will be quite, elaborate, having been obtained in Canada and Switzerland.

Mr. Shattuck Criticizes Expense

Each year the city borrows up to the limit and then comes up to the Legislature for authority to make fur-A ther borrowings outside the limit, said Henry L. Shattuck, state Representative in the Legislature, in the course of his remarks in favor of accepting the adverse report of a legislative committee on Mayor James M. Curley's bill for a repeal of the Boston tax limit. Later, the Massachusetts House of Representatives accepted the adverse committee report.

Mr. Shattuck said: "While I am opposed to a tax limit I have no quarrel with the disposition of this particular bill—for this bill repeals the tax limit without providing any additional safeguards with research to additional safeguards with respect to the incurring of debt. Hand in hand with any repeal of the tax limit should go greater restrictions on borrowing, at least equal to those provided by the Municipal Bonds Act, to which all cities and towns except Boston are subject. "During his first year as Mayor, Mr.

Curley borrowed not less than $6,433 .-000 for purposes exclusive of county, water, and rapid transit. Of this $4,753,000 was within the debt limit and $1,680,000 outside. This averages over twice the annual borrowing since 1909. The net debt of the city was increased by $2,478,014.16. During the year just ended $5,155,000 was borrowed exclusive of the items tioned and the net debt was increased by $607,568.44, an increase of about $3,000,000 in the preceding 13 years." ESTHONIA FOSTERS FLAX EXPORTATION

Slow, Steady Increase in Growth of Fiber, Which Is Expected to Surpass Pre-War Levels

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Jan. 22-The yield of flaxseed and fiber in Esthonia for the year 1923 is estimated to be slightly less than that in 1922. In 1922 the yield of flaxseed was about 8470 tons and fiber 9585 tons. The average yield per hectare in 1922 was 9.35 tons of seed and 0.4 tons fiber, this being equal to the average yield per hectare in pre-war times. During the period 1900-09 the average annual yield was 15,000 tons of flaxseed and 16,700 tons of fiber. During the period 1900-09 the area under flax in Esthonia 1900-09 the area under flax in Esthonia was approximately 47,000 hectares, but during recent years this area has been only about 25,000 hectares.

Esthonia, owing to her climatic conditions, is mainly a fiber-flax-growing country, but as flaxseed is of equal importance in Esthonia the flax is gathered late in the autumn, so as to give the seed time to ripen.

Flax Seed Gathered

Though this late harvesting of the flax has a depreciating effect on the quality of the fiber, rendering it less soft and therefore cheaper in price, the loss caused by the inferior quality of the fiber is made up by the produc-tion of the necessary flaxseed required for sowing. Esthonian flax is retted mainly in special ponds, but in some districts-especially during the droughts, the flax is dew-retted. Several factories have recently been built in Esthonia.

however, where the retting process is carried out on modern lines. The breaking of flax is done chiefly by hand, but in some places machin ery is used. The lack of suitable ponds for retting, and the old-fash-ioned methods employed in the working of the flax, make the cost of production high, and are the chief rea-sons for the comparatively slow de-velopment of the cultivation of flax in material. The remainder is exported to foreign countries.

The export of flax-fiber amounted approximately to 9800 tons, value 1,000,000 Esthonian marks in 1922 and during the first nine months of 1923 to 8750 tons also valued at 1,000,000 Esthonia marks. Of this Belgium took 2800 tons in 1922 and 3800 tons in 1923, the figures for Great Britain being 2800 tons and 2300 tons respectively. The export of flaxseed in 1922 amounted to over 3000 tons, of which the United Kingdom took 1800 tons and Finland nearly 1100 tons.

Special regulations have been put into force in Esthonia for the expocontrol of flax-fiber and seeds. Li-censes are not required for the flax-trade, but concerns desirous of extrade, but concerns desirous of exporting fiber and goods must register themselves at the Ministry of Trade and industry and furnish particulars as to their standing, and the location of the warehouses where the flax-fiber and sheds will be stored for export.

Flax-fiber and seeds can be exported from Esthonia only on condition that they bear a mark approved by the Ministry of Trade and Industry. The export duty on raw and scutched flax fiber is 70 Esthonian marks per pood (about 36 pounds), the duty on tow being 30 Esthonian marks per 36 pounds. The duty on flaxseed for pounds. The duty on flaxseed for sowing is 8 Esthonian marks per pood, and on the seed for oilcake 25 Esthonian marks per pood.

Library Service Bill Reported

THE bill to provide for a library information service in the Bureau of Education was favorably orted one week ago today, after learing in Washington before the use Committee on Education, Freduces Committee on Education Freduces reau of Education was favorably reported one week ago today, after a hearing in Washington before the House Committee on Education, Fred-erick W. Dallinger, presiding. Miss Edith Guerrier of the Boston

Public Library and a member of the Council of the American Library Association reported that the bill was introduced to Congress in 1919 when it had been favorably reported by both the House and Senate Committees on Education. Since then, she said many questions had been asked. The most important of them, with their answers, follow:

1. Why is a Library Information Service needed? Service needed?

To enable the libraries to inform the people of these United States with regard to the functions and achievements of their Government.

ments of their Government.

2. Why are libraries especially fitted to place Government printed matter before the people?

Because they are supported by the taxes of the people for the benefit of the people, and are nonpartisan in their attitude. Because they were established and are maintained for the purpose of providing the people of the United States with education and information in printed form.

3. Is it the business of a library to act as an exponent of the Government to the people?

If a library's functions include that to the people?

If a library's functions include that of making information of national import easily accessible to the public, thing the desired the public it is.

4. About how many libraries are there in the United States?

The last available figures gave about 18,000 public, school, and society libraries in the United States.

5. How many people use libraries?

At a conservative estimate, about 15,000,000.

6. How many publications are issued yearly by the Government Printing Office?

As many as 300,000,000 copies of official publications have been issued in a year.

what printed matter does the Federal Government issue which is of interest to the people?

Reports of the work of the various Reports of the work of the various departments, bureaus, services and offices. Lists of printed publications issued and of those available. Publications dealing with special subjects of interest to professional and business people—farmers, housewives, working people.

printed matter?

(a) They cannot get it unless they know which of the 200 or more Government offices furnishes the information required.

(b) By applying to the office issuing it, if it is free: by buying it from the superintendent of documents if it has a price.

Wasted Printed Matter

Is much of this matter wasted? 10. Is much of this matter wasted?
The Government printer says in his 1922-23 annual report that books and pamphlets, valued at approximately $1,000,000 a year, are wasted, $600,000 worth of this material has never been but into circulation, and $400,000 worth has probably been wasted in free distribution to persons who did not wish for it.
The Government printer's solution not wish for it.

The Government printer's solution is "elimination." What we want, however, is not ruthless elimination, but a smaller output of publications which concern comparatively few persons and a larger output of those which concern almost every one. :

11. Should not all this printed matter have a price?

No. Why not? Because it is good cessfully.

12. How will the proposed library information service result in bringing Government publications to the attention of the people?

By acting as a central Government information office and clearing house between Government offices and the libraries, which are the people's own educational extension centers. The office would prepare a card catalogue of the libraries of the United States of the libraries of the United States with concise information concerning the communities in which they are located; this list would be divided and subdivided in order to put into operation a selective distribution scheme. It would establish and maintain contact with all Government offices. It would maintain a subject card catalogue, giving sources of information. It would send out frequent notes of current publications.

13. In what department will such an office function most satisfactorily? In the Department of the Interior, Bureau of Education. Why? Because it is an educational extension service working through educational institutions.

To sell printed matter with a price, and to attend to its legitimate business of shipping printed matter so that such matter will not arrive weeks and even months late.

16. Why does not this service belong in the Library of Congress?

It is not the function of that library to carry on an educational extension information service of the character outlined.

17. Is there anything now in operation corresponding to the suggested service?

No. Libraries have had little encouragement to use Government

No. Libraries have had little encouragement to use Government printed matter, because (1) it is almost never received while it is still current. Recial from Monitor Bureau

London, Jan. 15

THE Duke of Portland, who has just completed his twenty-fifth year of office as Provincial Grand Master for Nottinghamshire, has been presented by the members of the province with his portrait painted by Richard Jack, R. A., which, after exhibition in next year's Royal Academy, will grace the walls of the Masonic Hall at Nottingham. His term of office is not a record, as one of his predecessors as Provincial Grand Master held the office for 37 years. In acknowledging the presentation, the Duke referred to the Masonic progress made in the province during the last quarter of a century. The number of lodges had increased from 18 to 43 and the number of members to 43 and the number of members from 880 to 2529, while the number of votes in the Masonic institutions had grown from 1658 to 12,426. During the past year alone £3410 had been sent to those institutions from

Washington Observations

Washington, Feb. 5

FOR a week Congress has been scandal. Barring the uncommonly fine and dispassionate statement of the case by Thomas J. Walsh (D.). Senator from Montana, the oratorical glory of Capitol Hill was not enhanced. For the most part, discussion consisted of political speeches obviously delivered for partisan effect.

AND LITERARY

In many ways that appreciation of Swinburne may count as an admirable example of Edmund Gosse's mode. True, it is longer than most of his essays in that kind; but it has just that mixture of direct distillation from life, with a certain literary aroma and relish of the subject, which gives a characteristic savour to his critical discriminations. He used as title for one of his books the term "Kit-Kats," which exactly hits off the form of portrait, not too long-drawn, not too long-drawn not off the form of portrait, not too long-drawn, not too insistent, which en-ables him to picture the man, and at the same time by a few sallent lines to suggest the milieu. In the Swin-burne essay, he gives us a picturesque present sense of the poet with his big head, tawny mane of hair, little legs, and restless, expressive gestures. He cunningly contrives all through the account to keep this whimsical aristo-cratic gnome before us, and in this individualizing art lies the secret power of Mr. Gosse over his prose instrument. In his critical "Kit-Kats" there is a recall of R. L. Stevenson, under various aspects, which fairly makes him live again as he was in young man of 20 or 21-"tall, prespaniel"; and, six or seven years later, see him again in London in the congenial surroundings of the old Savile Club. "Louis pervaded," says Mr. Gosse, "the club; he was its most affable and chatty member; and he for a marvelous gift in the delinea-lifted it, by the ingenuity of his in-cessant dialectic, to the level of a Ambition drove Chateaubriand to sort of humorous Academe or Mouseion." Today, as we look back, we see in Stevenson an accepted figure in literature with a recognized him in his quiddity:

When I try to conjure up his figure, I can see only a slight, lean lad, in a suit of blue sea-cloth, a black shirt, and a wisp of yellow carpet that did duty for a necktie. This was long his attire, persevered in to the anguish of his more conventional acquaintances. I have a ludicrous memory of going, in 1878, to buy him a new hat, in company with Mr. Lang, the thing then upon his head having lost the semblance of a human article of dress. Aided by a very civil shopman, we suggested several hats and caps, and Louis at first seemed interested, but having presently hit upon one which appeared to us pleasing, we turned to inquire the price, and found that Louis had fled, the idea of parting with the shapeless object having proved too painful to be entertained.

It would be too much to say that these live glimpses form the most valid part of Mr. Gosse's contribution to letters. We have to count up also the volumes in which he has passed under his measuring-rod the older poets, the writers of the seventeenth century, or, as in his "Northern Studies," the poets of Denmark and Scandinavia. One of the first to hail the genius of Ibsen, he has written a

THIRTY years ago or more, when my old acquaintance with Mr. Gosse began, he was still translator to the Board of Trade, and had rooms looking into Whitehall Gardens. These quarters had a pleasantly unofficial sir, with many books in evidence, not all of which had to do with the trades contemplated by the government board. He must have been rather taken aback, on that first occasion, to find one more would-be litterateur added to the army of London scribes. He did remark, pretty ominously, on the army of London scribes. He did remark, pretty ominously, on the Epicurean, and shows him emerging of the pen as a means of livelihood, but he was not too fatally discouraging. What most impressed me was his familiarity with all the instance over the new poets, and the life and outs of the Republic of Letters A that period be vas one of a group of young poets, including the late Austin Dobson, which was as lyrically efficient as any group we have today, although its practice of verse was set to a different measure. These pages from the intimate Diary of Pierre Loti, hardly of Pierre Loti, written between Chateaubriand inherited to the full the all the charm and precarious activity French literary tradition, to write of his writing days. We see him first on board a steamer from the Hebrides, views were useful propaganda to the reigning power-Louis XVIII declared ary young man of 20 of 21—tail, piet ternaturally lean, with longish hair, that his pamphlet in 1814, "Bonaparte and as restless and questing as a and the Bourbons," was of as much spaniel"; and, six or seven years later, value to him as 100,000 men—he became for a time a greatly honored royalist servant. Yet Chateaubriand is remembered for the things which have brought Loti enduring fame—

America in 1790, in a scheme for the discovery of the Northwest Passage, which proved to him, though his project failed, how exceptional were his label and a conventionalized fame.
But in this Kit-Kat his old friend fairly depolarizes him, and we see him in his quiddity:

We find ourselves transported back into the pages of "Aziyade" and "Reflets de sur la Route Sombre," and once again we meet that simple, honest sailor who, despite his inarticulateness, we had learned to know so well, Mon Frère Yves.

It has been said of Loti: "He does not study, he feels." Nature was in-deed to him an inspiration, and quite naturally, with exquisite comprehen-sion, with innate tenderness, he de-scribed what he saw, a bird on the wing, the sea, the sky, the moon's "rosy glow upon the sand, the trails of silver on the gloomy waters of the river," these were the things which he could not see nor write of, without profound emotion. We cannot but sistent lands so vividly and persistently that, when he finally visited them, he looked upon them as though he had always known them them, he looked upon them as though he had always known them.

In these loose pages from his diary—and, like Chateaubriand, everything that Loti wrote was in the nature of a diary—we find the trace of Chateaubriand's influence. But, while

The incident of the war that Major Putnam recalls was strikingly dramatic and significant—a choice of roads after the eight-day combat of Grant's army in the wilderness. One road, the road to the left, led to rest and recuperation (such pause having been the practice of the army of the Potomac in previous campaigns when there had been no substantial gain after several days' fighting): the other, "the road to the right meant a continuation of these risks, . . . more broken nights and toilsome days. He Knows the Sea and He Knows Human Nature

T IS not strange that Conrad, the Anglicized Pole who gave up country and career to take up his chances on the sea, should be acclaimed as the greatest living English novelist. For he writes of the things which he himself has experienced-of landing cargoes, ruling crews, managing and navigating vessels, of far voyages in strange seas. He uses his adventures as a basis for his romances. He knows the sea and he knows human nature at first hand, through suffering and sympathetic observation. and a delicacy and balance that rival and strong passions. Ships and seamen in his tales stand for the indomitable spirit in man that will not yield to fear and omens of destruction. The struggles he pictures become the fable of man's struggle with seemingly overwhelming enemies.

came a great writer of English. The boy was named Jozef Korzeniowski, the writer is known to fame as Joseph Conrad.

Conrad's ability to render his acute perceptions into language is superb. His command of what was an alien tongue is probably unequalled in the whole course of English letters. Through his mastery of English he brings us gifts that the rich and strange and new. Conrad are rich and strange and new. Conrad has come into English literature because the language exactly suits his purpose; in all things which relate to the sea it is matchless.

> Dramatic Scenes— Much Hard Fact

This collection presents the most fascinating records of the sea that have ever been told. Those who have not yet read Conrad and those who are thirty-third degree Conradians will want these books—they claim the approval of the average reader as well as of the literary compoisseur. Conrad, who has long known and loved the sea, writes of her moods, of her anger when the winds lash her, of the fear of her, of the men in the good ships that sail her and sometimes go down in her, of their ways, their rugged courage, the various phases of the lives they live. There are sentiment, romance, flashes of humor, glimpses of men that are sharp as etchings, many real dramatic scenes and much hard fact, and through all his pages the sound of the sea.

For a quarter of a century Conrad followed the sea.
Soon after his fifteenth year he was sailing on the Mediterranean, later becoming associated with the English flag and incidentally learning the English language. After his rise from cabin boy to master-mariner, and at from cabin boy to master-mariner, and at he accomplished his

A great friendship for all men in the said weaknesses permeates and dominates his work. This friendliness invests the most humble of his personages with a sort of heroic dignity. Boston A. A. to Play St. Paul-Westerners Defeat B. H. C.

In the other half of the doubleheader the Harvard Varsity sextet held its club rivals, the Maple Athletic Association, to a 1-to-1 tie, which was called at the conclusion of the third period, as the university has one of its real objective games in the "Big Three" to play Saturday, and did not wish to enter into overtime, a favorite pastime of the Maple team.

The playing, as previously, was exceedingly fast on both teams, and the play carried up and down the rink rapidly, the college team showing the better team play and the club team the better individual work.

Duncan Chisholm scored the Maples'

ers in a match here this afternoon by 11 goals to 1.

land each scored in seven of the 16 events.

Finland's strength was in the speed skating events, in which the Finlanders scored 49½ points, in addition to 16 points allotted as a bonus to athletes competing in every event.

The United States, which finished fourth, one point behind England, scored 10 of its 29 points when Charles Jewtraw romped home ahead of the field in the 500-meter speed skating event. Miss Beatrix Loughran and Mrs. C. B. Blanchard accounted for eight more by winning second and fourth places, respectively, in the women's figure skating event. The hockey team, by placing second to Canada, won five points, while Anders Haugen's fourth-place victory in the ski-jump for style added three more points to the score. BASEBALL CHIEFS MAKE DEPARTURE

Meeting Fails to Clear Up Existing Rumors

While presidents and officials of the American League Baseball Clubs are wending their way homeward after the annual spring meeting in this city, yesterday, baseball fans throughout the country are busy poring over the 1924 American League schedule which was distributed and ratified at the meeting. Many of these fans are, today, expressing disappointment over the outcome of the league meeting, which failed to clear up some of the existing questions in the baseball limelight at present.

The idea originated by G. H. Ruth of the New York American League Baseball Club, to give diplomas in the future to the player chosen as the best of the year, instead of a medal, was adopted yesterday by the club presidents. This means that diplomas will be awarded to G. H. Sisler of St. Louis Club, winner of the prize in 1922 and Ruth, last year's winner.

Another plan adopted was a change in the time for batting practice before the games, which was set at 30 minutes from the opening of the season up to June 1, and from then on to the end of the season the practice session will be 20 minutes as it has been during the 20 minutes as it has been during the fact that his club lacked a manager had been chosen. The absence of the Washington Baseball Club, did not appear in the least concerned regarding the fact that his club lacked a manager. When asked if he intended to take the position himself, he intimated that he had a man in view but did not wish to make anything public until the manager had been chosen. HARVARD DEFEATS SYRACUSE HARVARD DEFEATS STRACUSE

The Harvard University basketball team defeated Syracuse University in a fast game here. 33 to 24. Both teams produced fine individual efforts, but were weak team play. Louis Gordon, captain of Harvard, was high scorer with 17 points, including seven baskets from the floor. Greve, of Syracuse, accounted for 10 points. At half time the teams were tied, 16 to 16, but Gordon's efforts put the Crimson in the lead.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6—The leader of the Class B squash tennis team championship, the Columbia University Club, dropped back a point in this year's race yesterday, when the Yale Club, which has shown great improvement in recent matches, won their match by a score of 5 to 3. This enabled the Harvard Club, and the Princeton Club, who are tied for second place, to gain a match on them, as both won. The fourth match went to New York Athletic Club, who defeated the Crescent Athletic Club, who defeated the Crescent Athletic Club, was gregation still farther down the scale. Harvard Club won from Montclair Athletic Club, 5 to 2, while Princeton Club, the present champions, disposed of Heights Casino, 6 to 1, with a substitute team.

R. B. Haines, the Columbia star, was able to win his match on the Yale Club courts, after a slow start, from D. McK.

Blodget, but the next five players of the Columbia team lost in order, and only W. B. Brown, a newcomer on the list, managed to win from J. H. Vincent, who has been off the list for most of the season. W. D. L. Starbuck put up the best battle against C. F. Neave, but lost in the final game, after tieing the score at 13-all, and fighting on the final point for several innings. The summary:

FOUR LETTER MEN BACK AT PURDUE

Coach M. L. Clevett Expects His Gymnastic Team to Do Well

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Feb. 5 (Special)

"We are out to repeat our record of last year," is Coach M. L. Clevett's statement in regard to the prospects for the Purdue University symmastic squad for the coming season of intercollegiate competition. Gymnastics is a comparatively new sport at Purdue, but rapid strides have been made in its development since the inception of that branch of athletics here three years ago. Last season the Old Gold and Black squad competed their dual meet schedule without a defeat, and also made a creditable showing at the tournament staged by the Intercollegiate Conference Athletic Association. As a result of the success of the gym team last year, considerable more interest is being shown this season in this sport, and the gymnasis are looking forward to another good year.

Having four out of the six letter men from last year available for the gym squad gives Coach Clevett a quartet of vetaran performers upon which to build his team. Capt. J. Koster '24, ex-Capt. J. M. Rudy '24, H. L. Bushman '24, and L. D. Gleason '25 are the letter men from last year who will again compete under Old Gold and Black colors during the coming season. These men were consistent scorers. In dual meets last winter and seldom failed to place high in their respective events. Rudy will serve his third successive season on the gymnastic team this year, and the ex-captain will complete a successful carser in this sport if he continues to show the same form that has marked his performances for the last two seasons.

his performances for the last two seasons.

Captain Koster will enter two or three events in each meet during the coming year, the Old Gold and Black leader being slated to work on the flying rings and the parallel and horizontal bars. Rudy is sure to represent Purdue in the tumbling and side horse events while Bushman will team with Koster on the flying rings and horizontal bars. Gleason, the other letter man on the squad is also a likely entry in these events.

R. R. Gish '26, G. L. Jackson '26, R. VanMeter '26, and C. A. Brown '24 are the new members of the sym squad that should win places on the team. The latter two are Clevett's choice in the club swinging while Gish and Jackson may be used for tumbling, flying rings, or the bar events. Jackson was the outstanding gymnast on the freshman squad last winter and was awarded a medal for being the best all-round gymnast at the Intramural Carnival staged last February. H. K. Leedy. '26 is another possibility for the varsity lineup and may team with Rudy on the side horse event.

The first white man ever to cast eyes on what is now Kentucky, according to Kerr's history of the State, was Dr. Thomas Walker of Virginia, who in 1750 came through the Cumberland Gap, which he then named Cave Gap, which he then named Cave Gap, with a party of explorers. They camped on Yellow Creek, which runs through the town of Middlesboro; gave it its name and spent the first night in Kentucky on the banks of Clear Creek at Pineville, 10 miles north, to which they gave the name Clover Creek.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 25 (Special Correspondence)—Establishment of a National Park in the Appalachians, recommended by Stephen T. Mather, has turned attention to the Cumberland Mountains in Kentucky, with their wealth of natural beauty, and to the Cumberland Gap section which John M. Robison (R.), Representative from Kentucky, would have set aside for such a project.

Two bills in Congress propose a park in these mountains, one in Virginia, not far from the former congressional district of C. Bascom Siemp, President Coolidge's secretary, the region made famous by the "Trail" kentucky tlirough this natural opening in the mountains. A monument of stones erected to Boone now stands mear the pass. History again left its mark at the gap in the days of the Civil War. After the retreat of Bragg from Perryville, General Stephenson with Confederate forces occupied the town of Cumberland Gap, at the foot of the pass on the Tennessee side. The resolutions adopted deprecated the status quo which, it was said, tends to develop a "narrow nationalistic outlook."

New York attracts eminent foreign visitors at any season of the year, but it is not often that so many prominent Germans are here, or are soon coming, as is the case just now. Dr. Andreas Hermes, Minister of Finance under the Wirth and Cuno governments, has been here on private business for some time. Egon Hauss, German financier, has also been visiting New York under a similar veil of reticence. Harry Kessler, former Minister to Poland, and Frau Adele Schrefber, make New York their focal point for extensive lecture tours. The great question confronting the world today is: How can war be most quickly brought to an end?

The correct answer to this question involves pushing to its ultimate the reason for there being war. At the last analysis, war can be traced to the belief that destructive physical force can be used as an effective means to gain

Probably the two most unpopular men in France are M. Chéron, the Minister of Agriculture, and M. de Minister of Agriculture, and M. de Lasteyrie, the Finance Minister. M. professional hockey be a success, the Arena will back a team of its own in another season or two.

It is believed that the apparent decision of the New York sporting element to introduce professional hockey in Madison Square Garden has had its influence on Boston opposition, so keen a year ago. With these two cities, professional hockey in the eastern part of the United States will be given a substantial trial, and, if successful, undoubtedly Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and other cities will follow.

Mr. Brown is doubtful as to the manner in which Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League of Canada, will take to the idea of releasing prominent players of that league to the new franchies teams. It has been believed by some that Calder is not in full accord with Duggan's latest activities, because of not having been previously notified.

committee. A comprehensive American salon, such as that shown annually at the Pennsylvania Academy, of the Fine Arts, is in reality a colossal still-life problem, in which an appreciation for spaces and for balance in color and form creates from blank walls the grace of beautiful composition.

The one hundred and inheteenth annual exhibition is one of the most brilliant, most scintillating aggregates of American painting and sculpture ever staged in the time-honored galleries of the academy. Hugh H. Breckenridge and Charles Graffy, the guiding spirits of the banging committee, have lost no opportunity for the dramatic in art staging. Each wall, each vista, each corner and alcove provides an emotional thrill. From entrance to exit the eye meets with a series of tableaux, an effect which, in theatrical verity, far outdistances the individual value of the works exhibited.

landscape has, perhaps, scred on the side of literal finesse. It has heretofore been content to interpret; to discover beauty which nature has spread in profusion to delight the observing eye.
Today, however, it veers sharply from the laboratory bent of discovery to the emotional urge of creation.

Hudson's boats and waves and sky are daring mass impressions translated in emotional color. For pigment plays an important rôle in the dramatizing of art. It is, perhaps, the innermost impulse of the artist seeking liberation. Thus Waugh, Hudson, Lie, and Bellows paint with a passionate sincerity in rich colors. Their work will appeal with deep satisfaction to men and women in whom there dwells the call of the wild.

Bellows and Kroll

civilization. His is an art with a touch of sardonic humor, more critical, perhaps, in its intent.

As color revelations one might note the work of Leon Kroll and that of Henry McCarter. The latter paints in high key. In "Faith," there is a burst of color emotion which pales the garb of the women worshippers: in "White Isseparated into its prismatic components. Mr. Kroll paints darkly, with a repression of pigment somehow indicative of struggle, of hopes unrequited, of the wistful longing of mankind. Of the younger painters, Ross Braught sees with more individuality than his colleagues. He tends toward a conventionalization of forms. Language sprang from art, from the picturization of what later became phrase-logy. Curiously, perhaps, the art of today is gradually developing a sign language. In the many efforts of the modern school one may discover similarities in the conception of hills, trees, houses, and even figures.

With this reversion to more primitive ideas, there has come also a tendency toward translation of form in mural-esque technique. In its break with realism, modernistic theories have, unconsciously, fostered the introduction of art symbols, and with the symbols has come a return to narrative pictures. Despite his protestations to the contrary, the contemporary painter is rapidly developing into a teller of tales.

biblical are Emil Carlsen's delicate nocturne of Christ at prayer, and Violet Oakley's brilliant triptych, destined for Vassar College, "Great Wonder."

The latter provides the dramatic climax of the exhibition. Its blaze of gold, red, and blue—coloring, perhaps, a less forceful draftsmanship—creates a vista through many galleries, and supplies a magnet for the eye. This scheme of dramatic centering has been maintained throughout in the placement of a Benson still-life decoration, a child fantasy by Charles Hopkinson, "Ladies' Chain," in the architectural mural "Recessional" by Eugene Savage, and in the cryptic "Discovery" by Thomas Benton.

Color is the keynote of the exhibition.

In their thirst for pigment, nurtured through the dark, suppressed years of the late nineteenth century, the painters of today use nature as a theme for color improvisations. Thus Hugh H. Breckenridge produces "Across the Harbor."

Redfield, Garbet, Meryman, Ufer. Couse, Woodbury, Cecelia Beaux, Martha Walter, Edith Emerson, George Elmer Brown, Lillian Wescott Hale, Wayman Adams, and hundreds of others add to the marked variety of the display. There are modernisms and academic renderings; there are works of distinction and those in varying placed that only the sophisticated may discover the paucity of their conception and technique.

The sculpture of the one hundred and nineteenth annual is on a higher plane than that exhibited at the Academy in recent years. Two works stand out, as definite achievements, a torso, exquisitely modeled by Arthur Lee, and a massive portrait bust of Frederick Allen by Anthony di Bona, admirable in fullness of forms and in basic characterization.

A torso yields itself more readily to imaginative reaction than the figure intact. Jennewein, Berge, Gregory, and Ellotti, ali, contribute figure studies, with emphasis upon the pleasing jingle of external design. of art symbol of the tures. Despite his protestations to the tures. Despite his protestations to the contrary, the contemporary painter is rapidly developing into a teller of tales.

Thus, one may find "The Widower" in the stately McKinlock Cloister, adjoining the galleries of the new Hutchinson Terrace, the Antiquarians have installed their tapestries, old furniture, marbles and rare fabrics. The gray hold burdens in lumpy white bundles is leading the family goat over the hills to lead the family goat over the hills mural trend. A man, bearing his household burdens in lumpy white bundles is leading the family goat over the hills to some new and untried habitation. Behind are the conventionalized hills and flowering shrubs, against which the lonely figures stand in sharp outline. It is a pattern picture in strong contrasts, but one to which memory returns with haunting interest.

Maral Elements

"Morning" by Jean MacLane—with its theme of child adoration, its figure cut-outs against a rich purpleblue backdrop—is singularly stagy in effect. Again one feels the mural emphasis, a trend carried to more definite lengths in "Adoration of the Mother," by Charles W. Hawthorne. Here the artist has accentuated the flatness of his technique by sharp white outlines, consciously used.

The religious motif in the painter's art may be felt more strongly in the one hundred and nineteenth annual than in its predecessors. Both "Morning" and "Adoration of the Mother' have religious connotation. They interpret in terms of contemporary life the Madonna concept. More traditionally biblical are Emil Carlsen's delicate nocturne of Christ at prayer, and Violet Oakley's brilliant triptych, destined for

The Middle Ages knew the secrets of fine dyes. Rarely today do we find such blue, green, rose, yellow, red, brown, purple or lovely secondary tones, and the whites have a quality unusual. Russian Program Given by St. Louis Orchestra

St. Louis Symphony program (Jan. 31-Feb. 1)

was devoted to the Russians, as follows:

Rachmaninoff, Symphony in E Minor, No. 2. Op. 27.

Rimsky-Korsakoff, excerpts from "Le Condo" (a) Introduction, (b) Cortège de noces du rol Dodon (first time in St. Louis)

Liadoff, "Kikimora," a legend for orchestra, Op. 63.

Glasounoff, Valse de Concert, Op. 47.

These amazing Russians! Originality, individuality, and vision they possess in large degree. The Symphony No. 2 of Rachmaninoff is a big conception. The man has the boldness and vigor of Tschaikowsky, but lacks that composer's striking individuality of melodic outline. His thought is profound, but not sad and tragic like that of his great predecessor.

Rimsky-Korsakoff is not unduly profound, but is supremely endowed with pictorial imagination. Rudolph Ganz, conductor of the orchestra, understands noble pathos of this colossal dirge was lost in alowness of tempo. It seemed as if the reserve force of conductor and ensemble had been consumed during the symphony, for the "Tannhauser" overture found a reading of little more than average quality. Again there occurred extreme tempi, to such an extent that the Venusberg music sounded blurred at moments. Mr. Rothwell of late has given way to the tendency of "driving" the ensemble at high speed, piling up climaxes which, if not always artistic, are at least darling and applause-producing. Allowing for approximately the same nonoperating income and fixed charges as in 1922, the-balance applicable to the stock would be approximately $11.80 a share on the $344,859,905 stock outstanding. In 1922 earnings were equivalent to $9.47 a share on $344,380,906 average stock outstanding, and in 1921, $8.93 a share on $342,875,400 stock.

On the basis of its own operations in 1920, irrespective of federal compensation or Government guaranty, Southern Pacific would not have fully earned its 6 per cent dividend. Actual earnings would have been equal to about $2.93, but with compensation and guaranty, it was able to show the equivalent of $10.56 a share.

but with compensation and guaranty, it was able to show the equivalent of $10.56 a share.

In 1918, on the basis of its own operations, Southern Pacific showed $14.22 a share for its stock, but the outstanding amount was smaller than at present.

In 1917, the system's best year, earnings of about $18 a share were reported. The amount of stock then outstanding was $272,823,406. Southern Pacific's stock has been gradually increased through bond conversions. The increase since 1917 has been approximately 26.2 per cent.

mately 26.2 per cent.

Bend Conversions

All but $3,185.500 of the convertible 5s, originally authorized to the extent of $55,000,000, due June 1, 1934, have been converted. Before segregation of the oil properties of Southern Pacific and the formation of Pacific Oil Company. Southern Pacific stock sold at a premium and bond conversions into stock at par were stimulated by rights accruing to stockholders.

Since 1921 there have been no further conversions, and the privilege expires June 1 next, hence there is unlikely to be further increase of Southern Pacific stock on that account.

Buying of the oils continued to be the feature. Tidewater extending its gain to 2½ points. Cosden preferred rising 2½ and Mexican Seaboard common and the certificates and Royal Dutch moving up a point or more. Sugars were firm. Cuba Cane, preferred rising a point. Corn Products, Pressed Steel Car and Union Bag's Paper were heavy, dropping a point or so. Foreign exchanges opened higher.

Business was suspended at 1230 p. m. and Small Barbard. Spended stock and higher to day on the cast and buillah demonstration in Baldwin which sent that stock up nearly three service because of storms in the east and buillah demonstration in Baldwin which sent that stock up nearly three service because of storms in the east and buillah demonstration in Baldwin which sent that stock up nearly three service because of storms in the east and buillah demonstration in Baldwin which sent that stock up nearly three points was the day's individual feature, although Kresge jumped 10 points to an asmall turnover. Northwestern Rail-rood shares were strong.

Considerable profit-taking took place on such issues as Pressed Steel Car, Du Pont, Corn Products, and Hayes Wheel, which dropped from one to almost three points.

A firm undertone continued in the railroad list, with low-priced issues leading the advance. Selling pressure was distanced and smaller receipts, due to unfavorable weather and in sympathy with wheat. BUYING IN WOOL MARKET RETARDED BY CLOTH SURPLUS

Low Prices of American Woolen's Opening Cause Hesitation-Firmness Abroad

The opening of heavyweight goods by the American Woolen Company last week, at prices which mean substan-ially no change from a year ago, espewith the 12½ per cent advance in wages which was made in the interim, has been a subject of no little reflection wages which was made in the interim, has been a subject of no little reflection among the members of the wool trade, and so far as possible they have been trying to analyze the situation in the light of these opening prices to determine their course for the coming season, for the new clip season in the west is imminent.

The fact that the bare prices on the goods, without considering the wages advance above mentioned, show an advance of only 2 to 3 per cent, where comparisons are possible, has furnished food for thought, and all the more so because of the situation in the retail clothing trade, where representative houses are offering their lines of heavy-weight clothing at half-price sales.

Certinity there has been a temporary overproduction, which taken in conjunction with the unseasonably warm weather of the fall and early winter, has resulted in an adverse situation on the consuming end of the industry, although the question of supplies is equally grave at the other end of the industry.

No Heavy Baying Reported

No Heavy Buying Reported

No Heavy Baying Reported

And so, while the wool trade is concerned with the immediate question of acquiring further supplies in the west and in the foreign markets, considerations such as above outlined have given pause to operations for the time being, and while yearly reports from the initial openings have been encouraging, there is evident a desire to be quite certain of the outlook before buying very heavily in the west on the sheep's back, as has been done in other years.

Some wool has already been contracted on the sheeps' backs, as previously noted in these columns, notably a large Nevada clip and two or three clips in Arizona, involving several hundred thousand pounds in the latter State; say 750,000 pounds altogether, on a clean basis, landed Boston, figured at about $1,20@1.25 for fine and fine medium French combing wool.

Since these wools were taken, there has been a little wool purchased in the west of last spring's clip.

It turns out that only about $00,000 pounds of the big pool at Roswell. N.

M. was purchased recently, a selection being made of the finer clips which, it is understood, will probably cost not far from $1.35. clean basis, landed in Boston, or equivalent. Growers in the west are very strong in their ideas concerning the future and so, for the present an impasse exists as between the grower and merchant.

ent an impasse exists as between the grower and merchant.

In the foreign markets firmness is noticeable—almost everywhere. It would appear that the demand for crossbreds is rather less active than it was and that the pace in London on these descriptions has settled down to a basis about 10 per cent above the closing rates of the previous series. On merinos, however, there has been a quickening in the demand within the last fortnight and prices, especially on the most desirable lots have been advanced noticeably.

Faulty wools in London yesterday were weaker and sometimes off 5 to 10 per cent from the earlier price levels. America was a keen operator for the choicest fleece merinos at fully recent rates and the Continent continued to huy necks and pieces almost equal to the price for fleece wools. Good warp seventies wools out of London are costing about $1.37 clean basis, landed in Boston in bond.

In Australia this week the market has been very firm. Japan was buying freely at the Brisbane sale yesterday and apparently without limits, with prices up a penny a pound in the grease, so that the clean landed cost. Boston, in bond, was up about five cents a pound, the most conservative houses quoting good 64-70s combing wools at $1.27, clean basis, landed Boston, in bond.

wools at $1.27, clean basis, landed Boston, in bond.

In Sydney this month there are to be offered 90,000 bales and in March 82,000 bales, the season closing in Bydney and Melbourne March 19. At the current series in Brisbane there are being offered (Feb. 5, 6, and 7) 45,000 bales, while about the same quantity probably will be offered March 25 to 27, inclusive. In Melbourne-Geelong some 47,000 bales will be offered in the fortnight commencing Feb. 11.

Prices have shown little change in the New Zealand sales latterly, the selection not being especially suitable for this country.

In Bouth America the offerings are limited and are absorbed about as fast as they are received in the central market. Offerings are made on a firm basis.

LUMBER BUSINESS

BUFFALO, Feb. 6 (Special)—Lumber prices are not likely to advance materially in 1924, in the opinion of Angus McLean of Toronto, president of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association. The association has been in session in Buffalo, holding its first convention in the United States.

"The cost of producing lumber on the American Continent is so high that over European markets have been almost destroyed," Mr. McLean said, in reviewing business for 1923, and discussing the outlook for 1924.

Wool Noils in Demand
In the local market there has been a noteworthy demand for mohair noils of medium quality and sales are reported very freely at about 60 cents for the better lots and for mohair sorts at around 55 cents or a bit more. There has been a stronger demand for low grade wool noils, also, especially for quarter-bloods at around 60 to 63 cents.

Total payment of taxes assignable to moderate, with prices holding very firm throughout the list. Fine staple Montana wools are held at $1.40 and even more for really choice wools, while half-blood combing wool is quoted at $1.30 firm for good wool; three-eighths is held on the upper side of $1.10 and quarter-blood combing is quotable at $95 cents firm. Some sales continue of $4-708 wools at $1.22 and up to $1.25, clean basis, in bond for the better wools, with topmaking sorts held firmly at $1.15.

Scoured wools have been rather more on the quiet side and there is some tendency reported to turn saide from second clip 4s and 5s. South American descriptions, which have risen in the last three months or so from 45 to 75 cents.

Maturing Serially as follows:

$3,000,000 due Rebruary 1, 1934 $5,000,000 due February 1, 1944 $3,000,000 due February 1, 1951

$3,000,000 due February 1, 1964 $3,000,000 due February 1, 1974

Dated February 1, 1984. Interest payable February 1 and August 1 at the office or agency of the Company in New York or Philadelphia. Redeemable as a whole or in part and for the Sinking Fund on any interest date on sixty days' published notice at a premium of 14 of 1% for each year, and for any one additional six-months' period, remaining from the date fixed for redemption to date of maturity, in each case with accrued interest, but in no event shall such premium exceed 3%. Coupon bonds in denominations of $1,000 and $500 with privilege of registration as to principal. Fully registered bonds in denominations of $1,000 and multiples interchangeable.

PHILADELPHIA TRUST COMPANY, TRUSTEE

The Company will agree to pay interest without deduction for Pederal Income taxes up to but not exceeding 2% per annum. The Company will also pay interest without deduction of the Pennaylvania State Tax of four mills on bonds held by residents of Pennaylvania as provided in the Mortgage.

Mr. J. M. Humphrey, President of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, has summarized his accompanying letter as follows:

The Lehigh Valley Coal Company is one of the largest producers of anthracite in the United States. Its properties are located in the Eastern Pennsylvania coal fields and include 40,966 acres of land owned in fee, of which 24,534 acres are coal bearing. It is conservatively estimated that this coal bearing acreage contains over 528,000,000 gross tons of unmined merchantable anthracite. In addition, the company leases lands estimated to contain over 110,000,000 gross tons of unmined merchantable anthracite recoverable during the term of the leases. At the present rate of production, it is estimated that the company's owned and leased properties have an operating life of over 90 years.

The First and Refunding Mortgage Sinking Fund Bonds will be secured by first mortgage on acreage containing approximately 76% of the unmined anthracite tonnage owned in fee by the company and upon all improvements thereon, and upon leases which run to exhaustion covering lands estimated to contain over 60% of the company's unmined leased tonnage (excluding term leases): The bonds will be further secured by direct mortgage on acreage containing the remainder of the company's unmined fee anthracite, subject to $11,514,000 underlying (closed mortgage) bonds, due 1933.

After 1933 these First and Refunding Mortgage Sinking Fund Bonds will be secured by direct first mortgage upon the entire anthracite property of the Company owned in fee. The First and Refunding Mortgage will provide that bonds may be issued thereunder to an amount not exceeding $40,000,000 in the aggregate including reserved

For the five years ended December 31, 1923, the net earnings of the Company, after all operating expenses, maintenance, taxes (except Federal taxes), and adequate allowances for depletion and depreciation have averaged $4,957,210 per annum. The annual interest charge on all funded debt of the Company now outstanding including this issue is $1,311,700. Net earnings, therefore, have averaged over three and three-quarters times the above annual interest charges.

The mortgage will provide for a sinking fund payment of five cents per gross ton on anthracite of all sizes mined from lands owned, operated, or leased by the Company and sold or commercially used, with a minimum sinking fund payment of $250,000 in every year, to be used for the purchase or redemption of bonds of this series which shall be kept alive in the fund until maturity. Addi. tional sinking fund payments will be provided in respect of subsequent series.

The proceeds of the sale of this Series of Bonds, in accordance with the final decree of the United States District Court, will be paid over to the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company as provided in the Plan of Segregation.

These bonds are offered subject to sale and when, as and if issued and received by us, and subject to the approval of our counsel, Messrs. Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, Philadelphia.

Application will be made to list these bonds on the New York Stock Exchange.

Despite rumors, there is no Penn-sylvania Railroad issue coming. Two lifting prices of both listed and overthe-counter issues.

While a number of issues are in the negotiation stage, some of which may come on the market within a fortnight, bankers are in no great haste to find these new offerings. They are satisfied that there will be a stronger market a month from now on which to offer their wares.

The hold-up of the Burlington issues, for instance, at the demand of a Nebraska state official, will probably mean a better price for the bonds.

Such offerings as are being made are being cleared up rapidly, one issue alone having been an exception, and it is being steadily disposed of. Dealers have little on hand.

Issues of new securities in January were larger than many assumed, on account of the celerity with which their were disposed of without halting the upward movement in prices. CUSTOMS RULINGS

NEW YORK. Feb. 6 (Special)—Imported grass cloth is held to be properly dutiable at the rate of 40 per cent ad valorem, in a decision handed down by the Board of United States General Appraisers, overruling a protest of R. F. Downing & Cb., Inc.

This cloth was classified by the customs appraising officers as a unanufacture in chief value of vegetable fiber, under paragraph 1021 of the tariff act of 1922. Claim was made for duty at one of the lower rates provided in paragraph 1309 of the 1922 law for hanging paper. Judge Weller poluts out that the testimony introduced by the importers was insufficient to justify a classification under paragraph 1309.

In another decision by the general appraisers, overruling a protest of Yon Bremen, Asche & Co., the collector's action in assessing duty on pimentos in time, at the rate of 6 cents a pound, under paragraph 179 of the tariff act of 1922, is affirmed. Claims for lower rates are denied. These pimentos, Judge Waite points out, are properly dutiable as whole pimentos, as provided for in paragraph 779, even though the skin, stem and seeds have been removed.

fall, W. R. Wood, secretary of the Manitoba Prohibition Alliance, declared that the destructive effects of an increased use of liquor were already abundantly in evidence.

The aim of the Prohibition Alliance, Mr. Wood said, would be to co-ordinate with all organizations in Manitoba which are working in the interests of temperance. Its work will be mainly educational in character and it will deal exclusively with the issue of temperance.

Following Mr. Wood's address, the constituency, which for years has been a stronghold of "dry" sentiment, was reorganized along the lines adopted dur-

He possessed a genius for militant journalism, his "Political Register," "Porcupine's Gazette," and "Twopenny Trash"—to name only three of his ventures—being awaited at each issue with glee. Of all his works the "Rural Rides," reprinted in 1830 from the "Political Register," has lasted best, and it can still be read with great pleasure, because of its intimate pictures of English pro-vincial life and its keen observation of the homely details of the country-+ + +.

Between October, 1792, and June, Between October, 1792, and June, 1800, he lived in America, first teaching French refugees in Philadelphia, and then opening a book-shop in the same city. Here under the name of Peter Porcupine he wrote his Autobiography, one of his most pleasing works, and defended Washington against the attacks of Thomas Paine. Returning to England, he founded, in 1802, the weekly "Political Register," 1802, the weekly "Political Register," which continued for thirty-three years to battle for parliamentary reform and for the rights of the laboring and rural classes. From May, 1817, to November, 1819, he again lived in America. ber, 1819, he again lived in America, as a farmer at Hempstead, Long Island, and writing his famous "Grammar of the English Language," which Hazlitt called "as entertaining as a story-book." The fruit of this experience was "A Year's Residence in the United States," a book well worth looking up. In it, along with some well-deserved criticism of our forefathers, Cobbett praises highly American in the Company of the control an industry, ingenuity, and versa-

Cobbett was at the height of his fame as journalist and pamphletser, fighting a good fight for the English farmer and peasant. Today he is beginning to attract attention once more; but not so much on account of his rare ability in the writing of clear, forcible and homely prose. Books are being written about him, and the Oxford University Press some time ago published a handy volume of selections from his works for use in schools.

It is hard for us to realize fully how large a figure he cut in his own day. Haslitt, Sir Walter Scott, and Coleridge admired him, with reservations, and, somewhat later, Carlyle, Sir Henry Lytton Bulwer, George Gillilian, Thorold Rogers and Miss Mitford all wrote about him in their reminiscences. siderable degree dependent upon upon a firm conviction in one's superior ability, is thought to aid in the winning of fame and prestige of position, which men so earnestly seek. The desire to be recognized as above one's fellows is a trait that has prompted mortals mightily to strive for that which they have believed to be the greatest prizes that can be gained. Yet, among such materialists, the conclusion has been quite generally accepted that the span of human life at its best is but brief, and worldly honors and material possessions are but temporary, soon to be laid down by the great and powerful, no less than by the lowly and humble. And while the applause for what is thought to be superior human ability has been general, it has been recognized that the egotist needed to be reminded that he was, after all, but a mortal, subject to the limitations and restrictions which characterize the mortal sense of existence.

It is related that when a Roman emwas being driven through the streets in a magnificent triumphal procession, a slave was stationed at his elbow, constantly to repeat to him, amid the acclaim of the people, "Remember, thou art mortal!" Apparently it was Surely no mortal can find in contemfeared that the plaudits of the multitude over his successes would deceive evaluation! him into thinking himself a superman. In the light of this significant message, is it not our first duty to acknowledge God as the source of all good; and following the Master's word, to be assured that we of ourselves can do nothing? It is said that among Abraham Lincoln's favorite lines of poetry were these:-

Cobbett loved birds and wrote about them charmingly. His tender-heartedness, where they were concerned, is shown by his account of the skylark's nest which he watched and on account of he watched and on account of which he delayed mowing a field of hay; and of the house-marten which built its nest inside his house, so that Laughing, saving he had to get up early every day to "Thank's saying

A Nominy and Its Use There was a time in the history of every English village when the nominy was as much an institution as the willage forge, or manor house, or church. Readers of Southey's "Doc-tor" will remember Betty Yewdale's description of her efforts to learn the art of knitting socks, and how the work was punctuated by these words—

"For a good pudding pie"
"Taa hoaf weat, and tudder hoaf rye,"
"Sally and I, Sally and I, for a good pudding pie.'

EDITORIALS

MANY of the calculations made by political prognosticators in the United States have been upset by recent

The Political Breezes of 1924 happenings more or less unrelated to politics. The result is that new bearings are being taken in an effort to meet unlooked-for emergencies. Impartially analyzed, the facts seem to indicate a tendency, more apparent now than perhaps ever before in the history of the country, to disregard established partisan lines. There is lacking that adhesion, even in the organization of the party in power, which has usually solidified the ranks of both the major parties on the eve of a presidential election. Insurgency is rife, despite what has been regarded as an almost unanimous popular approval of the course of President Coolidge since his accession, and the general belief that his nomination would be virtually uncontested.

Indeed the opposition to the nomination of Mr. Coolidge probably will not manifest itself openly in the Republican convention when it meets in Chicago. It will take form, apparently, in an effort by the so-called progressive element in the party to name an independent candidate. thus precipitating a condition similar to that created in 1912, when the revolt of the Roosevelt faction resulted in the defeat of President Taft and the election of Woodrow Wilson. But what was denominated progressivism in 1912, is this year more properly designated as radicalism. The term seems much more fitting. The effort will not be so much to unite in this movement those who, though calling themselves Republicans, are not, but to rally under the banner of pink radicalism all those of whatever former affiliation, whether moderate Socialists, Farmer-Laborites, or what not, with as many disgruntled Democrats as will find in the doctrines of the extremists a promise of class or bloc domination.

At the moment, accepting all indications at their face value, Senator La Follette leads as the choice of the dissenters. He has qualified to represent almost any degree of radical thought, and at the same time has convinced his admirers that he possesses the ability and experience to lead. He has reached that stage of political independence where he will not accept compromise. It would not much matter to him, personally, who might be the candidate of either of the regular parties, unless it should happen to be himself. The remedies he would apply and the policies he would adopt are those which none but he could administer to his satisfaction. Even Senator Hiram Johnson, with whom he once seemed to hold much in common, appears to have failed to keep step with him in his advance to a more extreme position. At the moment his preference seems to be for the Johnsons of the Magnus type, rather than those of the older order.

In the Democratic camp the changing fortunes of Mr. McAdoo have upset, at least for the time being, many well-laid plans. It would be presumptuous to suggest a candidate for a party which seems unable to name one for itself. Not in many years has there been so little to indicate the probable choice of that organization. The old slogan, "When in doubt nominate Bryan," seems to have become antiquated and obsolete. Even the peerless leader himself modestly indicates his determination to espouse the cause of another. There remain Senator Underwood and Mr. John W. Davis, whose right thus far has not been challenged. But the mention of their names does not bring that thrill which spells popularity.

This lack of unanimity, the apparent absence of that spontaneity which once virtually indicated the course of political action long in advance of the meeting of the national conventions, emphasize the opportunity which awaits those who, no matter what their partisan affiliations, recognize the imperative need of a return to that real democracy which must forever remain the true basis of government. Recent exposures of political dishonesty in Washington have not won support for either political party. That organization or that candidate for high office which gains the support of the independent men and women of the United States must come with of purpose

SHORTLY after their repatriation at the close of the World War, the British soldiers who had been kept

An American Influence Abroad prisoner by the Bulgarians near Plovdiv, also known by its classic name of Philippopolis, sent the Bulgarian commander of their camp, Colonel Nikoloff, a watch inscribed with their appreciation. A few months later, when Colonel Nikoloff, during the Stambulisky régime, was imprisoned on a trumped-up charge of peculation, the former prisoners set the entire machinery of the British Legation in Sofia in motion to obtain justice for their former keeper, and obtained it.

This keeper of a prison camp for British soldiers is a direct tribute to American influence, exerted overseas. The influence came to him two generations ago in the village of Batak, which was destroyed in 1876 by the Turks under revolting circumstances in the course of their effort to suppress the Bulgarian national consciousness. To the little orphan amid the ruins of chronicled Batak came an American lady, Mrs. Anna V. Mumford. She took the little waif, made him her foster son, and brought him up in the home school which she was conducting with her own means in Plovdiv.

With the outbreak of the World War, the commandant of that prison camp in Plovdiv conducted it on the lines which he had learned from his American foster mother. When a Russian-educated general undertook to treat the British prisoners in the Cossack way, the American-educated subordinate made so strong an issue of the matter that the Russianized general was overruled by higher command, and the thousands of British captives never forgot his courageous stand for humanity.

Thus, thousands of hearts in England were lightened and thousands of English lives in a Bulgarian prison camp were brightened, because an American woman, having left her hearth in America, had held out a helping hand to a little boy in sore distress amid the ruins of Batak. This is a small and isolated example of the common purpose of humanity which is being served in all parts of the world by American and English influence; for the repatriated English prisoners, in their vigorous action in obtaining justice for Colonel Nikoloff, did him just as real a service, and advanced the interests of humanity just as much as Mrs. Mumford had advanced them when she went amid the ruins of Batak. When shall that influence be exerted in an organized way in the vast field of international effort to restore the world to its equilibrium?

THE reported difficulties which have recently been brought to the front in connection with Afghanistan are a good example of the great change which has come over Asiatic politics in the last ten years. Before the war Afghanistan, which has a population of about 6,500,000, was a "hermit" kingdom, not unlike Tibet. Practically no Europeans were allowed to enter it. It was governed by an ameer on lines which had not changed from the date of its conversion to Muhammadanism centuries before. It was mainly preoccupied with saving itself from being crushed out between the enormous Russian Empire to the north and the vast British Indian Empire to the south. And because its rulers recognized that the Government of India wanted peace and not expansion, whereas they were not so confident of the intentions of the Russian Tsardom, it had long supported any arrangement whereby the Indian Government, in return for an annual subsidy, exercised some sort of supervision over its foreign relations, on the understanding that the Ameer would repel any aggressive action by Russia from the north.

The war changed all this. The spectacle of Europe locked for four years in the most destructive struggle of history lowered immensely the prestige of the West in the East. The catchwords of liberty and self-determination, universal at the time, awakened a new desire for independence. The Russian revolution destroyed the traditional menace to Afghan independence from the north. After the disturbances which followed the assassination of Ameer Habibullah Khan in 1919, both internal and frontier, the Indian Government recognized the new situation in a treaty signed in 1921, whereby Afghanistan became a completely independent state, and the control of its foreign relations and the subsidy were alike dropped. After an unsuccessful attempt to produce a Soviet régime, the Bolshevist Government also recognized the Ameer. Afghanistan, therefore, today has abandoned its hermit character, sends and receives diplomatic representatives, and has taken its position among the sovereign nations of the world.

The recent problems do not concern the status of Afghanistan, but the condition of the wild and hilly tribal zone which lies between that country and the northwest frontier province of India. This zone is inhabited by probably the most untamed, the most bellicose, and the most physically vigorous human stock now left on the earth. The life of these hill tribes centers around intertribal wars and interfamily feuds.

During the last two years, however, probably as a result of the excitement caused through the whole Muhammadan world by the Turkish war, and of the unrest artificially stimulated by emissaries of the Third or Bolshevist International, a long series of outrages has taken place, consisting mainly of the killing of British political officers and their wives, by gangs who have descended from the hills for the purpose and then retired again to inaccessible spots. Throughout it has proved extremely difficult to secure the punishment of the perpetrators of these crimes, partly because of the reluctance of the tribes to hand their own tribesmen to justice or to administer it themselves, and partly because the miscreants usually fly to some other tribal valley where they are protected by sympathizers. The recent friction with Afghanistan has arisen from the fact that the Government of India alleges that the assassins are being harbored in Afghanistan, and complains that the Ameer will not fulfill the ordinary requirements of international dealing and assist in ending the outrages by helping to capture the perpetrators. The exact facts are not yet disclosed, but apparently the Indian Government has stopped a consignment of arms from entering Afghanistan as a method of pressure on the Ameer to pay attention to its protests. The rumor that war was impending seems to have emanated solely from Bolshevist sources. Doubtless some means will be found for stopping the outrages and restoring normal relations between India and Afghanistan.

A CERTAIN American, so the story goes, won the esteem of the governments of France, Germany, and

For Sale: Tax Immunity

Russia. The French, to reward him for his services, gave him the equivalent of a large sum of dollars in francs, which were so numerous in their depreciated state that it took a suitcase to carry them. The Germans on their part, not to be outdone, gave him a bill-of-lading for a freight car filled with a like value of marks. As for the Russians, they offered their benefactor a small printing press and told him to go ahead—he had helped them—let him print for himself all the rubles he wanted.

The foregoing fable expresses forcibly the straits to which certain transatlantic powers are reduced. Some Americans, however, who find amusement in the situation abroad, are apt to assume a freedom from financial absurdities in their native land which is, in fact, unjustified. What, for example, it is asked, is the logic of a nation's underselling its own taxes; of setting up a drastic tax on incomes, on one hand, and providing, on the other hand, an agreeable avenue of escape for those who wish to buy immunity?

Just such a policy as this is charged against the United States today. Economists assert that in the working out of the American income tax law, although a maximum tax of 58 per cent is provided on paper, anyone who actually wants to may buy immunity by investing his income in the $12,300,000,000 of wholly nontaxable securities now affoat in the country. One has the privilege of making the choice: to invest money direct in industry and pay taxes, or to invest the same amount of money in state and local exempt securities and see someone else pay the taxes. Faced with a 58 per cent maximum income tax, what man of great wealth would hesitate in his decision? The higher American surtaxes are indeed traps which the tax-exemption privilege has long since sprung.

Now there is a bill for a constitutional amendment before the House of Representatives which is directed against the further issuance of such tax-exempt bonds. If it is passed, as it deserves to be, it will enable the federal Government to protect its own taxes and remove the disagreeable truth from the present charge that if the Germans have their mark, and the Russians have their ruble, the Americans still have their tax-exempt bond.

THE temptation always is to regard lightly or carelessly those responsibilities which are not to be assumed

The

immediately. The youth of today, although perhaps impatient because of the manner in which the affairs of the world are being conducted by those attempting to shape them, takes too little thought of the time when this responsibility will be his. He perhaps hopes that by some as yet undiscovered process he may suddenly achieve or attain that superhuman efficiency which will mark him as a great political or social alchemist, able to apply his secret formula in the adjustment of affairs which have long perplexed those not so wise as himself.

Quite remarkably, it may be said, this hopeful view is shared even by those of a somewhat older generation who have had some helpful and constructive part in carrying on the world's work. President Coolidge, in the course of an impromptu address delivered before the Ohio Society of Washington a few nights ago, declared that "whatever the perplexities of the day may be, there is coming on, in the youth of your state and my state, and of the Nation, character and ability to meet them and to solve them all for the welfare of humanity." That is a brave and a hopeful forecast, surely. But it lays a tremendous responsibility upon those who are now standing upon the threshold of their activity, unmindful of the task before them. To them it appears, no doubt, that the time when they will be called upon to assume this responsibility is remote. But it is not. The few short years pass quickly, and as they pass the burden is gradually shifted from the shoulders of the veterans to those of the recruits, and the marching column

It should be observed that the President, in appraising the qualifications of those who soon will comprise this new leadership, reckoned upon two essential qualifications. He counted upon ability as one prime requisite, but before this he placed character. Without character the mere ability to do counts but little. It may be said of those who occupy positions of leadership today that. many know how the great problems of humanity should be solved, but lack the conviction and courage which character alone can fortify and make constructive and effective. Reasonable theories have made the way of peace and progress plain. Without protest we all quite generally accept as fundamental the old-fashioned brotherhood-of-man idea, just as we profess to subscribe to the unselfish precept laid down in the Golden Rule. But too many of us lack the character to back our convictions with courageous performance. We have the ability to do, but possess neither the will nor the moral courage to enforce our convictions.

Civilization has emerged a considerable distance from the abyss which it faced during and after the Great War. But its status has not been established more than theoretically in the minds of men. The same subtle influences, the same negative qualities which made that war possible, will assert themselves again and again until the end of time unless there is established in the characters, in the inner consciousness of mankind, the willingness to sacrifice every selfish desire upon the altar of peace. No ability to accomplish the thing desired will avail if there remains absent the first great attribute which the President named.

Editorial Notes

Just now, when the name of the winner of the Bok Peace Plan is being heralded around the world, it is opportune to mention another peace plan which has much to commend it in many respects. Henry Ford is reputed to be its author, and four words are sufficient to tell its story. Said the motor magnate recently, when asked why he did not enter the contest: "I meant to, but overlooked it. My plan is very simple, and would, if put into effect, absolutely insure international peace. It is in brief this: 'Make everybody speak English.'" At any rate, the burden of proof that it would not work is on those who would deny its efficacy.

ADAPTING a paragraph recently published in the Mexican Trade News, the following question is propounded: "What is it which is the beginning of existence and the end of trouble; the center of honesty and continually in heaven; the commencement of ease and to be found in every democracy and republic; the very heart of freedom and without exception in independent circumstances, and yet forever in debt, always out of cash, and in bondage perpetually? Answer, the letter "e."

Notes of a Tropical Trip

We mere civilians sitting comfortably under the wide-spreading awnings of the Manchuria, as she ascended Gatun Locks, never suspected that we were in the midst of horrendous war. Not until the bulletin of wireless news appeared the next day did we learn that the airplanes roaring overhead and dropping an occasional flower were in fact bombing the U. S. S. California, as she slowly descended the parallel lock. For it was then revealed to us that the procession of destroyers, cruisers, and battleships that filled the canal and oppressed the locks, to the despair of merchant captains eager to pass the Isthmus, made up, in fact, the Blue Fleet, striving to win through to the Caribbean, against the long-distance fire of the Black Fleet in the offing beyond Colon, and the determined assaults of the aerial navy, from which pink-faced boys waved friendly hands to their foes beneath.

In actual war the great ship which we had so extraordinary a chance to study as, a scant 100 feet away, she sank slowly in the lock, would have presented no such stirring spectacle as today. For in such case she would have displayed but a bare expanse of steel decks and turrets, with all the ship's company stowed away, out of sight. But today, viewed bows-on, she was a pyramid of white-clad, fresh-faced young American manhood. From deck to the fighting tops, wherever there was room for a man to stand, the jackies were crowded—clad in immaculate white, clean-shaven, smiling, obviously proud of their ship and themselves. The spectacle was one to make the pulses beat faster, even though one hoped that all that complicated structure of steel, and all those disciplined young minds and bodies, might never be put to the use for which the one was designed and the others gathered together.

4 4 Ordinarily it takes about eight hours to pass through the canal. Today it has taken us fifteen. The normal traffic through the great cut averages sixteen ships a day. As a result of the naval maneuvers more than sixty craft-according to one who professed to keep tally-have passed us on the way to the Caribbean outlet. How many merchant ships are in our line we do not know. Immediately ahead of us is a Japanese freighter, proceeding with a deliberation which makes our captain eager to edge by. But the Japanese stands sullenly on his rights, clings to the center of the channel, and blocks the way clear to Balboa. "We ought to have some California law on the canal," says one grumbler, restive at the snail's pace to which the obstructionist condemns us. As a result we get into Balboa-the United States port for Panama Cityat I a. m., instead of by daylight. But the long night trip through the southern end of the canal was a revelation to those who had thought of it merely as a lonely waterway through the jungle. Instead, it sparkled electrically at points, like Times Square at theater time. I mention the fact with hesitation, lest manufacturers of chewing gum and soft drinks be moved to add to the lights of Miraflores or Pedro Miguel the scintillating announcements of their wares.

The first locks to pass as one goes toward the Pacific are the great series at Gatun-three steps upward to Gatun Lake, formed by damming the Chagres River. Just eleven years ago I watched the construction of the great hill they call a dam, and the long troughs of steel-reinforced concrete which constitute the locks. Hundreds of Barbadian blacks were doing the work then, under the direction of American engineers, and I recall one of the most striking etchings from the needle of Joseph Pennell, showing a group of these at quitting time, clinging like bees to a great steel hook at the end of a cable and being hoisted out of the cavernous lock. Then there was the constant clatter of dredges, the distant boom of blasts in the Culebra Cut, the incessant rumble of trains bringing the spoil from the cut wherewith to build up the dam. There was no trickle of water then, where, today, a battleship, drawing forty feet, floats securely. Black faces now peer out of the windows of the electric mules that draw the ships through the locks, and a few black hands pull on the hawser and do longshoreman's duty. But in the main the visitors at the dock suggest a garden party. Officers in white, girls in multicolored fabrics, are down to see the ships go by.

At one side of the lock is a well-appointed golf course, with a broad fairway and smooth greens, so near the ship that one enthusiast insists he could "hole out in one" from the bridge. Later in the evening, when we come to Pedro Miguel Locks—a brilliant cluster of lights in the early tropical night—the throng of residents of Uncle Sam's Canal Zone makes as gay a social picture as one might hope to see on a Lenox lawn, or at a North Shore golf club. Between the army, navy, and marine forces stationed on the Zone, and the very considerable number of engineers and civil employees engaged in the upkeep of the canal, an American community, numbering well up in the thousands, is gathered in the string of villages between Christobal on the Caribbean, and Balboa on the Pacific. An auto ride of little more than two hours covers the whole distance, so that a coherent active social life is always maintained.

The famous cut-officially named Gaillard in honor of the engineer who gave his life to its construction, but still known chiefly as Culebra Cut-shows at many points the instability of the soil through which it is dug. Evidences of new slides are on every hand, and one is interested to notice how far back from the actual banks of the canal the hills have been cut away to lessen the pressure and attain what General Goethals called "the angle of stability." Old Mother Earth has curious ways of resenting interference with her established conditions. An engineer told me one day that, while standing on the bed of the cut, directing some work, he noticed that some small bit of machinery, which had been on a level with his feet, had apparently sunk some distance below him. On investigation it appeared that the part of the canal bed on which he was standing was slowly rising. "It was forced up by the pressure of the high hills on either bank," he explained, "just as, if you pressed your hand on the surface of a pan of dough, it would rise all around it." Today one can see, in the way in which the hills have been cut down for a distance of half a mile back from the canal, the method adopted to lessen this pressure.

One morning in 1913 I stood on the crest of the hill at Culebra, looking down into the cut. I could see nothing but a dense mass of fog, which had come rolling in from the sea and had filled the cut to a height of perhaps 150 feet. From beneath this came an indescribable clamor of shouting men, rumbling trains, clanking machinery and, now and 'again, the dull roar of a dynamite blast. Where I stood was bright tropical sunlight. Forty feet below was the surface of the sea of mist, under cover of which all this human activity was being prosecuted. I was like a spectator waiting for a curtain to rise then, and today, as I made my way along the narrow cut, crowded with the war vessels of the Nation, I felt as though I were witnessing the culmination of a drama in which Theodore Roosevelt and Col. George A. Goethals played the star parts.
